Atlantic City Electric Company (“ACE”), Delmarva Power & Light Company (“DPL”) and Potomac Electric Power Company (“Pepco”) (all subsidiaries of Pepco Holdings LLC, collectively the “Pepco Holdings utilities”)¹ are utility companies that provide gas or electric utility services to customers in New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, and the District of Columbia.

Due to the evolving COVID-19 pandemic, state Governors and other elected officials in areas in which the Pepco Holdings utilities operate (or in adjacent areas in which employees and contractors may reside²) may issue orders that require closure of non-essential or non-life sustaining businesses or may impose travel restrictions, quarantining and/or testing requirements for residents and visitors. The Governors and other officials have routinely provided exceptions for work purposes, generally, or for essential and life sustaining businesses to allow essential workers to continue providing essential services. The work of the Pepco Holdings utilities is essential to the provision of safe and reliable electric and natural gas service to its customers during this crisis and their workers are essential workers.

By extension, affiliates, companies and contractors that provide materials and services to the Pepco Holdings utilities are an essential part of the Pepco Holdings utilities provision of utility service. The work of these affiliates, companies, and contractors is essential and therefore must also continue to enable the Pepco Holdings utilities to continue to serve their customers.

We understand that governmental officials, including law enforcement, may question your ability to continue working. If you are traveling for work-related purposes on behalf of the Pepco Holdings utilities, including commuting, please present this letter and your work identification if needed.

Sincerely,

John T. Anthony
Chief Operating Officer
